5.4 Glossary

26a permit - written approval required under Section 26a of the TVA Act, which must be obtained from TVA prior to construction, operation, or maintenance of boat docks, piers, boathouses, rafts, buoys, floats, boat-launching ramps, fills, nonnavigable houseboats, or other such obstructions which may affect navigation, flood control, public lands, or reservations along or in the Tennessee River or its tributaries.

access rights - property rights across TVA-owned shoreland held by some adjacent landowners. These rights provide ingress to and egress from the water and allow the landowner to request TVA permits for proposed docks and other water-use facilities.

additional areas - shoreline areas that are currently classified as part of the TVA-owned-and-jointly-managed or the TVA-owned-and-managed shoreland categories, but would subsequently be reclassified as residential shoreline access under some SMI alternatives.

alluvium - material such as earth, sand, gravel, or other rock or mineral materials, transported by and laid down by flowing water.

anaerobic - oxygen deficient.

APE - area of potential effect (National Historic Preservation Act) backlot - a residential lot that does not have lakefront access but is located in a subdivision associated with the lake.

benthic - refers to the bottom of a stream, river, or reservoir.

best management practices - a practice, or combination of practices, that has been determined, after problem assessment and examination of alternatives, to be the most effective, practical means of preventing or reducing the amount of pollution generated by nonpoint sources to a level compatible with water quality.

biostabilization - use of vegetative plantings to control erosion.

buildout - a term used by TVA in this EIS when referring to the estimated maximum amount (percentage) of shoreline that could eventually be developed under each alternative.

chert - hard, fine-grained sedimentary rock composed almost entirely of fine-grained silica.

chi-square test - a statistical test for determining whether the frequencies observed in a sample differ from the frequencies expected in the sample.

colluvium - soil material and/or rock fragments moved by creep, slide, or local wash and deposited at the base of steep slopes.

coniferous forest - characterized by evergreen trees having needles or scalelike leaves.

conservation easement - a cost-effective voluntary conservation alternative to land acquisition that can be used to protect scenic landscapes, encourage clustered development, or provide other public benefits.

contiguous - adjacent; touching.

croplands - lands used for growing agricultural crops such as soybeans and corn.

cultural resources - any historic structure, historic site, or archaeological site that is protected by the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) or other preservation legislation.

cumulative impacts - impacts which result from the incremental impact of the action when added to other past, present, and reasonably foreseeable actions, regardless of what agency or person undertakes such actions (40 CFR 1508.7).

dbh - diameter (of a tree) at breast height (i.e., 4.5 feet above the ground).

deciduous trees - trees which shed their leaves at the end of the growing season.

DEIS - draft environmental impact statement.

direct impacts - effects which are caused by the action and occur at the same time and place (40 CFR 1508.4).

DO (dissolved oxygen) - the oxygen dissolved in water, necessary to sustain aquatic life. It is usually measured in milligrams per liter or parts per million.

drawdown - area of reservoirs exposed between full summer pool and minimum winter pool levels during annual drawdown of the water level for flood control.

dredging - the removal of material from an underwater location, primarily for deepening harbors and waterways.

edge - the junction of two different habitats, such as forest and grassland egress - the act or right of going or coming out (i.e., across TVA-owned residential access shoreland).

EIS - environmental impact statement.

embayment - a bay or arm of the reservoir.

emergent wetland - wetlands dominated by erect, rooted herbaceous plants such as cattails and bulrush.

eutrophication - the nutrient enrichment and response in productivity of a water body; this is a natural aging process that can be accelerated by nutrients added by humans.

fecal coliform - common intestinal bacteria in human and animal waste.

fee simple ownership - to have full and complete ownership of land.

fish-habitat improvement structures - structures such as brush or rock piles, log cribs, spawning benches, stake beds, and/or natural vegetation used to improve fish habitat.

flood control storage - the volume within an elevation range on a TVA reservoir that is reserved for the storage of floodwater.

flowage easement shoreland - privately owned lakeshore properties where TVA has the right to flood the land as part of its reservoir operations. TVA also has permitting responsibility for proposed docks and other shoreline structures.

footprint - the total water surface area occupied by an adjoining property owner's docks, boatwells, and other related water-use facilities.

footslope - the inclined surface at the base of a hill.

forb - a nonwoody plant other than a grass.

fragmentation - the process of breaking up a large area of relatively uniform habitat into one or more smaller, disconnected areas.

gabion - a bottomless metal basket filled with stones used to reinforce a shoreline against erosion.

GIS (geographic information system) - a collection of computer hardware and software that helps people efficiently capture, store, update, manipulate, analyze, and display information about the location of the Earth's natural, cultural, economic, and human resources, and the man-made environment. Location is normally shown on maps with associated textual and numeric information that describes the characteristics of those resources.

grandfathering - exempting ongoing activities from new regulations, e.g., allowing docks, lawns, and existing other uses to continue within areas where access rights exist.

grasslands - an area dominated by grasses; includes lawns, pastures, and hayfields.

habitat suitability model - a model developed to describe the suitability of an area to a particular species or group of species. It normally includes measurements of many of the species' requirements, such as food or nest sites, and is useful in describing how the species will be affected by changes to an area.

herbaceous hydrophytes - nonwoody plants that thrive in hydric soil.

hydric soil - soil that is saturated, flooded, or ponded long enough during the growing season to develop anaerobic (oxygen deficient) conditions in the upper part.

hydrology - the field of study of the distribution and movement of water.

indicators - measurement indicators developed to gauge the effects of the SMI alternatives on each resource. These indicators provide the reader a basis for comparison of the alternatives.

indirect impacts - effects which are caused by the action and are later in time or farther removed in distance, but are still reasonably foreseeable (40 CFR 1508.4).

ingress - the act of entrance or access (i.e., across TVA-owned residential access shoreland).

issue - a question or subject of widespread public interest related to the potential environmental and socioeconomic effects of the proposed management alternatives.

kWh - kilowatt hour, which is the amount of energy equal to 1,000 watt-hours. Common measure for use of electricity over time.

loess - a type of soil consisting of windblown silt.

macroinvertebrates - aquatic insects, snails, and mussels whose species, genus, etc., can be determined with the naked eye.

mainstem or mainstream reservoirs - impoundments created by dams constructed across the Tennessee River.

marginal strip - a narrow strip of land owned by TVA between the water's edge and the adjoining private property, across which the property owner holds access rights and may construct private water-use facilities upon approval of plans by TVA.

maximum shoreline contour - an elevation typically 5 feet above the top of the gates of a TVA dam. It is often the property boundary between TVA marginal strip property and adjoining private property.

measurement indicators - see indicators.

mesic species - plants that require moderate amounts of moisture for survival.

mitigation - an action that either will result in avoidance of an effect or cause the results of an activity to be minor in significance.

mooring cells - structures built in waterways for barges and other large, commercial watercraft to tie off instead of anchoring.

multipurpose reservoirs - the reservoirs and associated land base that provide opportunities for recreation, fishing and wildlife management, water supply, waste water disposal, resource protection, and economic development, in addition to navigation, flood control, and power production.

NEPA (National Environmental Policy Act)

- legislation signed into law in 1970 which, among other provisions, requires U.S. government agencies to prepare environmental reviews on proposed policies, procedures, plans, approvals, and other proposed federal actions. Approval of a private water-use facility or sale of an easement to use federal land are examples of federal actions subject to NEPA.

NWI (National Wetlands Inventory)

- a program of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service that maps and categorizes wetlands of the United States based on "Classification of Wetlands and Deepwater Habitats of the United States."

navigable waterway - the Tennessee River and tributaries of the Tennessee River having a marked, 9-foot-draft navigation channel suitable for barge transportation.

neotropical migrant birds - birds which nest in the United States or Canada and migrate to spend the winter in Mexico, Central America, the Caribbean, or South America.

nonpoint source pollution - pollution such as nutrient increases, fecal wastes, and siltation occurring from sources such as agriculture or general urban development of an area.

nutrient enrichment - the addition of excessive nutrients above those naturally found in a water system.

nutrient loading - the addition of nutrients such as phosphorus or nitrogen from various sources in a watershed.

NWI - National Wetlands Inventory.

100-year flood - the level of flooding that has a 1 percent chance of being equaled or exceeded in any given year. Does not indicate a time period of 100 years between floods of this magnitude.

100-year floodplain - that area inundated by the 1 percent annual chance (or 100-year) flood.

open shoreline - areas where access rights now exist. This includes developed and undeveloped flowage easement and TVA-owned residential access shoreland.

P - a numerical value used in describing the significance of the results of a statistical test. A smaller value indicates increased confidence in accepting the correct hypothesis or rejecting an incorrect hypothesis. Also frequently given as P value or probability level.

parent material - the unconsolidated mass of rock material from which the soil profile develops.

periodic flood events - seasonal or intermittent inundation of an area.

permit for shoreline use - approval of proposed uses of TVA shoreline areas which can vary from the construction of water-use facilities or shoreline stabilization to the use of TVA lands for a variety of purposes, including vegetation management, recreational use, and agricultural use. These activities may be covered by a 26a permit or a TVA land use permit, depending upon the type of activity.

physiographic provinces - general divisions of land with each area having characteristic combinations of soil materials and topography.

platted - marked or delineated on a plan, such as a subdivision plat.

point source pollution - pollution which typically comes from an identifiable source, such as industrial and municipal discharges.

power storage - the volume within an elevation range on a TVA reservoir that is useful for the generation of hydroelectric power on an annual basis.

protective strip (around the shoreline) - A strip of land of varying width above the summer pool lake elevation bought by TVA to ensure TVA's ability to operate and manage the reservoir for navigation, flood control, recreation, and economic development.

qualitative - analysis based on professional judgment of quality, generally lacking hard data.

quantitative - analysis based on hard data or numbers that can generally be repeated.

raptors - birds of prey such as hawks, eagles, and owls.

reservoir project - a system of small reservoirs that collectively provide for local flood relief, water supply, water quality, and recreation.

riparian zone - an area of land that has vegetation or physical characteristics reflective of permanent water influence. Typically a streamside zone or shoreline edge.

riprap - stones placed along the shoreline for bank stabilization and other purposes.

riverine - having characteristics similar to a river.

safety harbors and landings - designated shoreline areas along the waterway where commercial traffic can tie off during fog, inclement weather, equipment malfunctions, and emergencies.

SAHI (Shoreline Aquatic Habitat Index) - the index used to determine quality of shoreline aquatic habitat, based on seven characteristics important to support good populations of sport and commercial fish.

scope - (noun) range of operation; extent of activity or influence.

scrub-shrub - woody vegetation less than 20 feet tall, under the Cowardin et al. (1979) wetland classification system. Species include true shrubs, young trees, and trees or shrubs that are small or stunted because of environmental conditions.

shoreland - same as shoreline area.

shoreline - the line where the water of a TVA reservoir meets the shore when the water level is at the normal summer pool elevation. This line is measured in miles in the SMI EIS.

shoreline area - the surface of land lying between the minimum winter pool elevation of a TVA reservoir and the maximum shoreline contour or TVA backlying property line (whichever is further). This area is measured in acres in the SMI EIS.

SMI (Shoreline Management Initiative) - TVA's effort to review existing permitting practices and establish a Valleywide policy to protect shoreline and aquatic resources, while allowing adjacent residents reasonable access to the water.

SMZ (shoreline management zone) - a healthy stand of woody and herbaceous vegetation around a riparian zone of a river, reservoir, or other water body. SMZs protect water quality, provide habitat for fish and other wildlife, control erosion, and provide other conservation benefits.

spud pole - a long, cylindrical rod used to stabilize docks.

standard deviation - a measure of the variability of a trait within a sampled group.

stratification - the seasonal layering of water within a reservoir due to differences in temperature or chemical characteristics of the layers.

substrates - the base or material to which a plant is attached and from which it receives nutrients.

summer pool elevation - the normal upper level to which the reservoirs may be filled. Where storage space is available above this level, additional filling may be made as needed for flood control.

tailwater - the part of a river just downstream from a dam where the flow and quality of the water are substantially affected by the dam discharge.

TDEC - Tennessee Department of Environment and Conservation.

Tennessee Valley 201-county region - the TVA power service area and the Tennessee River watershed, comprising 201 counties within a 58-million acre area.

TERDA - Tennessee Elk River Development Agency.

tributary reservoirs - impoundments created by dams constructed across streams and rivers that eventually flow into the Tennessee River.

(recreation) trip - engaging in one or more recreation activities at one or more recreation sites for an unspecified amount of time, but generally more than 3-4 hours. Several recreation visits could be made during one recreation trip (i.e., a person could go camping, fishing, and boating, and it would be counted as three visits to different recreation sites during one trip).

T-test - a statistical test for determining whether the averages of a trait measured in two different groups are equal.

turbidity - all the organic and inorganic living and nonliving materials suspended in a water column. Higher levels of turbidity affect light penetration and typically decrease productivity of water bodies.

TVA - Tennessee Valley Authority.

TVA-owned-and-jointly-managed shoreland - TVA-owned shoreline that adjoins land sold, transferred, or otherwise conveyed by TVA to developers, entrepreneurs, or local, state, or federal agencies for commercial recreation, public recreation, industrial development, or natural resource management.

TVA-owned-and-managed shoreland - TVA-owned shoreline where there are no outstanding access rights for private water-use facilities affecting its future use.

TVA-owned residential access shoreland - TVA public land where the adjoining private property owner has access rights across the land. The adjacent landowner may submit a permit application to TVA for proposed docks, other water-use facilities, vegetation management activities, and other uses.

TWRA - Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency.

understory - saplings, shrubs, forbs, and other low-growing vegetation present in a forest.

upland - the higher parts of a region, not closely associated with streams or lakes.

USACE - U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

USDA - U.S. Department of Agriculture.

USEPA - U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

USF&WS - U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

vascular plants - plants that have specialized tissues that conduct water and synthesized foods.

vector - an organism (insect, such as a mosquito) that transmits a pathogen.

(recreation) visit - the visit to an area or site to engage in some form of recreation activity. There is no timeframe associated with a visit but generally it is approximately equal to a visitor hour. A person could enter different recreation sites during a day or could make multiple visits to the same site in one day and it would be counted as more than one visit.

wetlands - TVA procedures for environmental review, define wetlands as "those areas inundated by surface or ground water with a frequency sufficient to support, and under normal circumstances do or would support, a prevalence of vegetation or aquatic life that requires saturated or seasonably saturated soil conditions for growth and reproduction. Wetlands generally include swamps, marshes, bogs, and similar areas such as sloughs, potholes, wet meadows, mud flats, and natural ponds."

winter drawdown elevation - the lowering of a reservoir water surface during fall to provide storage capacity for winter and spring floodwaters (generally accomplished by turbine discharge).

winter pool - the level of the reservoir during the flood season.
